

Radio Spot: 30-second

If you needed to find substance or mental health treatment services, for yourself or a loved one, would you know where to look?

Regardless of what we hope or expect, information on the internet is not always up-to-date, and it's often incomplete.

Nearly 12,000 people sought treatment for substance use disorder in Alabama last year, but that number could be higher if information was more widely available and easy to use.

With the new Connect Alabama app, help for substance use and mental health issues is now in your hands!

Learn more at vitalalabama.com or download it from your app store.